STRONG LEADER BEING SOUGHT

Big Three Ministers Base Defense Plan On Russian Preparation For War By 1952

LONDON, May 16—W. Averell Harriman, special Marshall Plan ambassador, emerged today as the potentially dominant figure in administration of the North Atlantic Defense Pact.

The Big Three foreign ministers are reported to have decided that Soviet Russia may consider herself ready for war by 1952.

As a result, diplomatic observers are showing increased interest in appointment of a prominent personality to head the pact.

The current London meeting of North Atlantic Pact signatories already has revealed general agreement among their 12 foreign ministers on the necessity for dynamic leadership, a speed-up in Western defense plans and coordination of economic and military aspects.

In searching for a leader of the calibre wanted, diplomatic observers hold increasing belief that a civilian might prove a better appointment for this important post than a purely military man.

IT IS FELT that the person selected must not only provide strong leadership but must possess a knowledge of the economic aspects of the defense problem.

In the opinion of some observers, a man like Harriman might fill the bill as supreme coordinator of the Atlantic pact defense plans.

He has had a leading role as Marshall Plan envoy in organizing the economic defense of Western Europe against Communism, is known to the leaders of every Western European country and as former wartime ambassador is thoroughly familiar with Soviet plans and tactics.

He also is well known and respected in Congress and has the full confidence of President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson.

It would be no surprise to well-informed circles in London if Harriman's name is among those being seriously considered for the post.

Should he refuse to accept the job—which is doubtful should it be offered—it is considered

Pennsylvania Primary Election Eyed By Nation

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 16—The political eyes of the nation focused today, on Pennsylvania where the voters will decide one of the state's hardest-fought primary campaigns and possibly chart a course for the 1952 Presidential election.

The spotlight will center on the bitter feud between the "Old and New Guards" of the Republican party which has split the state GOP wide open.

Gov. James H. Duff, who seeks the Republican nomination for the Senate, heads the "New Guard" forces which have based their campaign on his "progressive policies."

His opposition is led by former U. S. Sen. Joseph R. Grundy, wealthy and conservative industrialist who backs a slate pledged to return the state to traditional republicanism.

Political observers believe that the outcome of the Republican primary vote will set the die for the GOP's choice of a Presidential nominee in the 1952 campaign.

THE DEMOCRATIC primary is virtually a "no contest" affair.

Mt. Sterling Man Arrested

A Mt. Sterling motorist whose car rammed the rear end of a school bus is charged today with reckless operation.

Charges were placed against Marshall Seward, 24, after he was revived yesterday afternoon. He was knocked unconscious by the impact of the collision near Mt. Sterling.

The 25 children in the bus escaped injury.

Patrolman Stephen J. Hobar said Seward narrowly missed hitting his patrol car just before striking the bus. The patrol car, with warning blinkers operating, was parked at the side of the road.

Truman Enters Last Lap

Chicago Welcome Is Enthusiastic

ABOARD TRUMAN TRAIN, May 16—President Truman, assured by an enthusiastic Chicago reception that his "report to the people" has been successful, traveled the last lap of that 6,400-mile jaunt today.

The chief executive, apparently confident of continued Democratic successes, is due back in the nation's capital at 2:30 o'clock (EST) this afternoon ending the cross-country trip he started a week ago last Sunday.

Mr. Truman left Chicago aboard the Presidential special train last night shortly after addressing a cheering throng of 22,000 party faithful in the huge Chicago stadium.

His speech, broadcast nationally, climaxed the Democratic party's super show, the colorful "Jefferson Jubilee" which also brought to town Vice President Barkley, most members of the President's cabinet and other organization big-wigs.

A parade viewed by a crowd estimated variously at between 200,000 and 450,000 preceded Mr. Truman's speech.

In his address the President called for removal of "obstructionists" in Congress and for the election next November of Democrats to take their places.

THE CHIEF executive, speaking on the home grounds of the powerful Cook County central committee, specifically asked for the re-election of Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D) Ill.

Mr. Truman also had a good word for the other Senator from

Man Given Permission To Burn House

It will be perfectly all right for the man to burn down his house.

The statement came Tuesday from Circleville Fire Chief Talmer Wise.

It was in answer to a Pickaway County landowner who asked the chief fire-chaser if a match could be touched to an abandoned house near here to save normal demolition expense.

The landowner, who remains anonymous, declared there was no insurance on the ancient two-story structure, that it had no value.

In its place, the landowner wants to build a modern home.

UNABLE to answer the legal query promptly, Chief Wise said Tuesday he had contacted several local attorneys on the question.

He was told:

"The man can burn down the house without violating any law as long as no fraud is involved."

So, the message is going forward to the landowner.

However, Chief Wise said there are a couple of develop-

Lie Silent On Stalin Meeting

'Cold War' Solution Sought In Talks

MOSCOW, May 16—United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie met with Soviet Premier Stalin for an hour and a half last night. But Lie made no comment today on the result of talks he hoped would ease East-West tension.

His prime objective in visiting Moscow for the announced intention to seek a solution of the "Cold War" was a talk with the premier himself.

The interview with Stalin occurred at 10 p. m. and lasted almost to midnight. Present during the talks were Deputy Premier Vyacheslav Molotov and Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky.

Soviet official sources as well as Lie remained silent on the subjects which had been discussed.

Lie's meeting with Stalin was especially significant because of the fact that the U. N. chief had visited President Truman in Washington prior to beginning his current European tour and also had seen the heads of government in Britain and France before journeying on to Moscow.

The secretary general made his trip to Moscow in the hope of arriving at an agreement

Ferguson Request Is Refused

Duffy Claims New Suit Unnecessary

COLUMBUS, May 16—Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy today refused the request of State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson to bring a new supreme court suit to block the proposed survey of a $200,000,000 toll turnpike across northern Ohio.

Governor Lausche already has given the go-ahead for the transfer of $600,000 in highway department funds to the state turnpike commission to finance the survey following a supreme court decision of last March 22.

In rejecting Ferguson's request, Duffy pointed out that the grounds for the new suit as proposed by Ferguson "were fully considered by the Ohio supreme court, and the decision upheld the right to make the survey." Duffy continued:

"There were eleven points decided in that case. Five of the seven judges on the court concurred in deciding the first eight of these points in favor of the validity of the proposed survey and the remaining three were upheld by a clear majority in the court."

Duffy also informed Ferguson that the state supreme court repeatedly has held it lacks the authority to render advisory

Mean Man Title Given Again

ARLINGTON, Va., May 16—Two small black cocker spaniels have a new candidate for the title of "meanest man."

The dogs were rescued from tar that oozed from a roadside barrel by a motorist, who then called the Animal Rescue League. When the league's truck arrived the cockers not only were covered with the tar, but they had crawled into a patch of honeysuckle and had to be extracted.

Hours of patient work cleaned the pups' hair of tar, honeysuckle, etc., but so much tar worked into their skin they still may not live.

The "meanest man" is the person who put them in the tar. Veterinarians say that no dog will walk into a sticky substance. They must have been thrown there by someone.

IT'S A BRIGHT WORLD again for Mrs. Mary Brooks, daughter of a slave coachman, who at the age of 115 years has regained her eyesight following an operation at Gallinger Hospital in Washington. Removal of a cataract restored her vision after 30 years of blindness. Here nurse Muriel Wells helps the centenarian put on her glasses.

NO 'WHISTLE STOP' ORDERS

Lewis Turns Thumbs Down On House Invitation

WASHINGTON, May 16—John L. Lewis today rejected an invitation to appear before a House Labor Committee to answer charges that his United Mine Workers union is undemocratic.

The UMW president had been invited to testify before a House group headed by Rep. Jacobs (D) Ind., on charges by Lloyd Sidener, of Canton, Ill., that Lewis secretly countermanded his public "back-to-work" order in the recent coal strike and told the miners not to return to the pits.

In a letter to Jacobs, Lewis politely but firmly turned thumbs down on the invitation. Referring to Sidener, who was ousted as a UMW member after voicing the charges, Lewis said:

"Mr. Sidener is in error in his press quoted assertions that he received directly or indirectly any 'whistle stop' instructions from this office.

"No such instructions were uttered or authorized at any time by this office to Mr. Sidener or any other of the hundreds of thousands of officers and members of the United Mine Workers of America.

"The term 'whistle stop' has no significance in the coal mining industry."

LEWIS SAID his knowledge of the charges was derived solely from "press exploitation" of the case. He asserted that Sidener had not used his right of appeal from the action by his local union, Lewis explained:

"Until this is done there is no official action that this office can take in the premises."

The mine leader also pointed out that Sidener has appealed to the National Labor Relations

Normal Operations Resumed

Agreement Termed 'Satisfactory'

CHICAGO, May 16—The country's biggest railroad strike in four years ended early today on the seventh day of the walkout.

Less than four hours after the dispute was settled, the affected railroads began a return to normal operations.

The agreement was reached between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and representatives of four major railroads—the Southern Railway, the Santa Fe and western sections of the New York Central and Pennsylvania system.

It was announced in Chicago after a final nine-hour meeting between the union, the railroads and the national railway mediation board headed by Francis A. O'Neill Jr. O'Neill was aided in the negotiations by Board Member Leverett Edwards.

Spokesmen for the union and management described the agreement as "satisfactory." A railroad official further elaborated: "A good settlement for all concerned."

THE MAIN ISSUE in the dispute was the union's demand for an extra fireman on multiple unit diesel engines. A statement by the railroads said:

"The major issue in the dispute was resolved by the union's withdrawing its demand for a second fireman on multiple unit diesel-electric engines and the railroads agreed to arbitrate the union's charges that certain practices in connection with the operation of these engines were in violation of existing contracts."

Five Pass Civil Service Exams Here

Five of eight men who took examinations for positions in Circleville Police Department made passing grades.

Vernon Hawkes, secretary of the city Civil Service Commission said the test papers were graded Monday evening.

Receiving passing grades were Ray Raymond Anderson Jr., Harold R. Green, Carl E. Thompson, Everett Thompson and Dixie Lyle Watters.

Clyde O. Leist, city safety director, said that he was making an examination of each candidate's case history and would make two police patrolman appointments later this week.

There are two vacancies on the present cop force as the result of the resignations of Charles Scott and Earl Wallace, former patrolmen.

Leist indicated that a third vacancy may exist if Patrolman Turney Ross' recent assignment to motorcycle patrol duty is considered as weakening the office force. However, a third vacancy will be dependent upon consultation with Chief of Police William McCrady and city council, Leist said.

Drop In Delinquency Noted In Juvenile Court Report

Delinquency in Pickaway County juvenile court showed a sharp drop in 1949 over figures for 1948, according to data released this week by court attaches.

The court, which operates under the direction of Judge George Young, handles varied phases of work and not all of it concerns delinquency.

Karl Herrmann, the court's probation officer, said that adults are concerned in many investigations. At the same time, even cases of youthful altercations, rock-throwing and other neighborhood dis-

These were broken down as 29 cases of delinquency, 20 concerning dependency and neglect and two cases titled "special proceedings"—of problems such as youngsters tossing rocks, trespassing or getting on the nerves of neighbors.

FRANCE'S BOLD ACTION A FACTOR

Foreign Aid Anti-Red Bill Enters Last Lap In Congress

WASHINGTON, May 16—A $3,121,450,000 omnibus foreign aid bill to combat Communism around the world enters today the last lap of Congressional action which began Feb. 21.

A Senate-House conference agreement, reached late Monday sends the bill to the House, which is due to approve the Cold War measure Wednesday. Senate action later in the week will send the bill to President Truman.

The economic-aid legislation authorizes only 260 million dollars less than Mr. Truman wanted.

Meanwhile, one of the Senate's most influential critics of arms-aid to America's allies in the North Atlantic Pact, said he was beginning to feel that military assistance to Western Europe is worthwhile.

Sen. George (D) Ga., told an interviewer that his changing view is due largely to France's "bold action" in proposing a coal-steel pool with Germany.

George, second top Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, praised also the stand on Germany of the Big Three foreign ministers. He said it looks now as if Germany is really to be integrated into the economic and political life of Western Europe.

HE SAID THE proposed coal-steel pool "is the most constructive step of the whole postwar period." George added:

"It gives me more heart to feel that military assistance is worthwhile."

The southern Democrat voted against the arms-aid program when it was initiated last year at a cost of more than one billion dollars. President Truman is to ask Congress in the next few weeks to authorize a second round of arms-aid, which is estimated to cost another one billion dollars.

The economic-aid bill which is about to clear Congress, includes a conference compromise on the President's pet point four project for sharing

WASHINGTON, May 16—A House group was informed today that the Veterans' Life Insurance program is costing the government billions of dollars because it is operating under paradoxical and pre-Civil War standards.

The charges are being presented to the House government operations subcommittee, headed by Rep. Hardy (D) Va., by the subcommittee staff. The staff has presented information stating that:

1. The already publicized 2.8 billion dollar dividend payment is being made to veterans this year despite the fact that the program thus far has cost the government nearly six billion dollars, or 1.6 billion more than the 4.4 billion in premiums paid by veteran policy holders.

roads agreed to submit to binding arbitration the union's demand for a fireman on about 200 single-unit diesels used for switching, mostly in small isolated yards.

Firemen now employed on these switch engines will remain on the job. New diesel switchers, weighing less than 90,000 pounds put in service after June 1, also will be manned by firemen. An arbitration board shall decide the issue in all other cases involving switch engines.

ONE OF THE issues in the dispute was the union's demand for employment of a third fireman on multiple unit diesel engines. During the negotiations the union offered to arbitrate that point.

Under its terms, the brotherhood dropped its demand for an extra fireman on all diesel locomotives in road service except those covered by a previous contract.

The two parties agreed to submit to binding arbitration on the union's charges that the railroads violated that contract. That pact, according to the union, provided that where an extra man was needed on diesels, a fireman or engineman would be employed. The brotherhood charged the railroads were using "specialists" in those jobs.

Also to be submitted to binding arbitration is the union's demand for employment of a fireman on switching diesels. The parties agreed that firemen now employed on diesel switchers will be kept in their jobs, firemen will be employed on all new diesel switchers after June 1, and an arbitration board shall decide the issue in all other cases.

The railroads agreed to end pay differentials for firemen employed on electric and oil-steam locomotives. Those men now receive less than firemen employed on coal-steam and diesel engines. The differential amounts in some cases to a few cents; in others to as much as a dollar.

Another New York lawyer, Gilbert H. Weil, is the counsel for Bristol-Myers makers of "Resistab."

All three attorneys made it clear that both drug wholesalers are denying all of the government's charges and nearly all evidence was kept from going in to the hearing record by constant objections and other legal maneuvering.

The FTC has charged that advertisements claiming that Anahist and Resistab will avert or cure colds are "false and misleading."

Dr. John H. Dingle, professor of preventive medicine at Western Reserve university, was the first FTC witness and was scheduled to testify about a test of antihistamine drugs made last winter by a group of WRU research scientists.

The report of the WRU doctors questioned the efficacy of the drugs as a cure for common colds.

But because of numerous objections Dr. Dingle has not yet been able to tell the FTC examiner, Earl J. Kolb of Washington, of the results of the study.

But the locally published account of the study said that the drugs failed to stop colds, that generally the cold lasted seven days, whether treated with the drug or not.

This vital decision, according to reports current in Atlantic Pact Conference circles, was said to have prompted America, Britain and France to urge the speeding up of the rearmament program and a general strengthening of the Atlantic security system.

The decision further is reported to represent an advance by two years on the time which the Western defense chiefs thought it would take before Russia would be ready for war.

In 1948, the 171 cases involved 120 boys and 51 girls while last year there were 67 boys and 22 girls tied to the 89 cases.

While many official investigations were made by the court, only the cases of 28 boys and nine girls were detailed to the Bureau of Juvenile Research in Columbus during 1949.

Of the 28 boys, 15 involved traffic violations with nine of them 17 years of age. Breaking and entering cases numbered nine. Dominant age was 15.

Of the nine girls tagged in official investigations, four were cited for sex offenses. Two were 14 years old, the other two 15. There were three runaway cases and one burglary case among the fairer sex.

his host state, Paul Douglas, who likewise is a Democrat.

The President pledged a continuous fight for passage of his welfare legislative program and for world peace. He made a strong plea for carrying out the party's 1948 platform.

Departing from his prepared text briefly, Mr. Truman said: "I wish the opposition would come out for something so that we could have a real opposition party."

He added that the nation needs a strong two party system and said he hoped the Republicans would profit from the examples of the Federalists and Whigs.

The President denounced attacks on his trip which has been called a political jaunt at the taxpayers' expense but which Democrats have insisted was a "report to the people." Mr. Truman said:

The juvenile court has its own method for disposition of all cases. Some youngsters may be sent to the Bureau of Juvenile Research, not necessarily as incorrigibles, but to allow specialists to determine what actually caused the mis-step.

In many cases, the family background takes major blame. The youngsters sent to the industrial schools are not considered by the court to be "fit only for prison." Instead, the court believes that the youngster may stand a better chance of "making a man" of himself there rather than if left to drift in normal society.

At the same time—although no record in the court so states—it is evident that the judge is allowed wide latitude in ironing out the wrinkles in a youth's personality.

Michael J. Noon of New Lexington has obtained nominating petitions from the secretary of state office to run for congressman in this district on the Independent ticket.

If Noon secures one percent of the total vote cast during the last gubernatorial contest, his name will appear on the November ballot along with the hose of Dr. Walter Brehm, Republican incumbent; and Mel Underwood Jr., Democratic Party nominee.

Duff was bitterly opposed to the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey in 1948, while Grundy supported the New Yorker.

The governor blames the "Old Guard" for "five successive national defeats" and has declared that "if they win in Pennsylvania this year, they will produce another defeat in 1952."

Despite the national interest in the primary, the vote is not expected to be heavy among the 2,862,000 registered Republicans and nearly two million Democrats.

Firemen now employed on these switch engines will remain on the job. New diesel switchers, weighing less than 90,000 pounds put in service after June 1, also will be manned by firemen. An arbitration board shall decide the issue in all other cases involving switch engines.

ONE OF THE issues in the dispute was the union's demand for employment of a third fireman on multiple unit diesel engines. During the negotiations the union offered to arbitrate that point.

Under its terms, the brotherhood dropped its demand for an extra fireman on all diesel locomotives in road service except those covered by a previous contract.

The two parties agreed to submit to binding arbitration on the union's charges that the railroads violated that contract. The Cooke-Fine fight rates as a toss-up.

But since the governor normally controls state delegates to the national convention, a victory for both Duff and Fine would virtually ensure the important Keystone state's support of a liberal GOP candidate in 1952.

Duff was bitterly opposed to the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey in 1948, while Grundy supported the New Yorker.

The governor blames the "Old Guard" for "five successive national defeats" and has declared that "if they win in Pennsylvania this year, they will produce another defeat in 1952."

Despite the national interest in the primary, the vote is not expected to be heavy among the 2,862,000 registered Republicans and nearly two million Democrats.

This vital decision, according to reports current in Atlantic Pact Conference circles, was said to have prompted America, Britain and France to urge the speeding up of the rearmament program and a general strengthening of the Atlantic security system.

The decision further is reported to represent an advance by two years on the time which the Western defense chiefs thought it would take before Russia would be ready for war.

Delinquency Drop Noted

studied by the court involved 31 including boys and 20 including girls.

In 1948, the 171 cases involved 120 boys and 51 girls while last year there were 67 boys and 22 girls tied to the 89 cases.

While many official investigations were made by the court, only the cases of 28 boys and nine girls were detailed to the Bureau of Juvenile Research in Columbus during 1949.

Of the 28 boys, 15 involved traffic violations with nine of them 17 years of age. Breaking and entering cases numbered nine. Dominant age was 15.

Of the nine girls tagged in official investigations, four were cited for sex offenses. Two were 14 years old, the other two 15. There were three runaway cases and one burglary case among the fairer sex.

But out of the whole list, the court found that only four girls needed special correction. They were sent to the Girls Industrial School in Delaware. Of the long list of boys, five were sent to the Boys Industrial School near Lancaster.

LISTED UNDER the heading of "unofficial" investigations were 39 boys and 13 girls. The court pondered, among the boys, a majority of cases involving "carelessness and mischief" cases. These were the rock-throwers, trespassers and general cutups. Five of the cases were 17-year-olds. There were four eight-year-olds and four who were 14.

Next largest bracket concerned theft cases. Main offenders here were boys only 10 years of age.

Among the 13 girls listed in unofficial investigations, eight were cited for "carelessness and mischief," showing that the fair sex also tosses a poorly-advised rock now and then. However, the second largest bracket involved runaways; there were four under this heading.

The juvenile court has its own method for disposition of all cases. Some youngsters may be sent to the Bureau of Juvenile Research, not necessarily as incorrigibles, but to allow specialists to determine what actually caused the misstep.

In many cases, the family background takes major blame. The youngsters sent to the industrial schools are not considered by the court to be "fit only for prison." Instead, the court believes that the youngster may stand a better chance of "making a man" of himself there rather than if left to drift in normal society.

At the same time—although no record in the court so states—it is evident that the judge is allowed wide latitude in ironing out the wrinkles in a youth's personality.

Fatherly advice, and continual counseling probably are poured out by the team. . . . both to parent and child.

The President pledged a continuous fight for passage of his welfare legislative program and for world peace. He made a strong plea for carrying out the party's 1948 platform.

Departing from his prepared text briefly, Mr. Truman said: "I wish the opposition would come out for something so that we could have a real opposition party."

He added that the nation needs a strong two party system and said he hoped the Republicans would profit from the examples of the Federalists and Whigs.

The President denounced attacks on his trip which has been called a political jaunt at the taxpayers' expense but which Democrats have insisted was a "report to the people." Mr. Truman said:

The safety director would make some exceptions in enforcement of the no-peddler law. He said such charitable organizations as Red Cross, the VFW Buddy Poppy group, etc., probably would be given the go-ahead by the police department.

Such hawkers, however, of magazines, clothing, electrical appliances, etc., would receive an enthusiastic escort to the city limits.

Expert Says Eye Tests Tell Sex Before Birth

FRANKFURT, May 16 — Dr. Wilhelm Witzel's "eyes have it" theory of pre-natal sex prediction has proved 62 percent accurate in tests conducted under U. S. Army supervision in Germany.

Announcement of the results was made in Frankfurt by the 97th U. S. General Hospital.

The experiments were made on 100 American expectant mothers by Dr. Witzel, German physician who first advanced the theory that an unborn baby's sex can be forecast by examination of the mother's eyes.

Capt. Donald Kuntze, New York Medical College graduate who supervised the strict scientific test, cautioned against too much faith in the Witzel theory.

Election Candidates File Expense Accounts

Six of seven candidates involved in the major primary election contests here May 2 have filed expense accounts with the Pickaway County Board of Elections.

The seventh, Harry Montelius, had filed no statement as of Monday. The deadline for filing was last Friday.

None of the six financial statements showed any contributions, indicating that all local candidates paid for all their expenses out of their own pockets.

Largest expense account was filed by Troy White, unsuccessful candidate for Democrat Party nomination for county commissioner. He said he had doled out $173.12. His successful opponent, Harley Mace, paid out $162.38.

Other expenditures were: D. A. Yates, unsuccessful candidate for Democrat nomination for general assemblyman, $133.36; Ed Wallace, his successful opponent, $171.09; H. E. Louis, unopposed Republican candidate for general assembly nomination, $43.04; and Lyman Penn, Montelius' successful opponent, $128.14.

All candidates for political office, whether running for the topmost position on the ticket or merely for an unopposed seat on a party central committee, were to have filed their expense accounts by last Friday—ten days after Election Day.

CLEVELAND, May 16—More than 75,000 visitors strolled through the Fine Arts Garden and the Cleveland Museum of Art on Cleveland's east side during the fifth annual cherry blossom festival.

Director William M. Milliken at the museum said that an all-time museum record of 22,410 kept the turnstiles spinning.

Feature of the floral panorama were the hundreds of Japanese cherry trees in bloom.

and termed the small-scale survey "disappointing."

He said, however, that the Army is awaiting the outcome of a "much larger series utilizing the Witzel theory on women in early stages of pregnancy currently being conducted in Cook County (Ill.) hospital."

The officer added that a "comparison of their results may be of further interest."

DR. WITZEL was quick to point out that for him to advise an expectant mother whether to start ordering pink or blue trappings for the nursery he should examine her in early stages of pregnancy. He added that he preferred patients with light blue or gray eyes.

The Army tests were conducted on mothers who were in the last months of pregnancy and had predominately dark eyes.

Dr. Witzel, who first disclosed his theory last December, said he had been correct in eight out of ten cases in his predictions over the last ten years.

He explained that he made his sex forecasts by using a "slit lamp" during a simple 3-to-5 minute examination and determined his predictions by congestions of blood in the eyes and spots or changes in the coloring of the iris.

German and British medical opinion polled in Frankfurt consider any results of over 50 percent accuracy worthy of further study.

Physicians feel the 62 percent especially high since Dr. Witzel arrives at his findings with total disregard to any possible temporary ailments or irregularities in the physical makeup of the patient.

Dr. Witzel ignores, for example, any tendency for boys or girls only. Such irregularities, according to medical opinion, normally would place such a patient in an "exceptional" category since the normal ratio is 1,055 boys to 1,000 girls.

CALLED 'SOFT SPOT' AREA

New England Jobless Studied By Experts

WASHINGTON, May 16—A seven-man committee of leading economists was set up Monday to advise President Truman's Economic Council on measures to combat New England's unemployment problem.

The committee will hold its organization meeting in Boston May 20 and is scheduled to make its final report about Aug. 1.

Appointment of the group was announced by Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the President's three-man council of economic advisers.

He said the committee will analyze "a selected number of specific issues crucial to the promotion of economic stability and growth in New England."

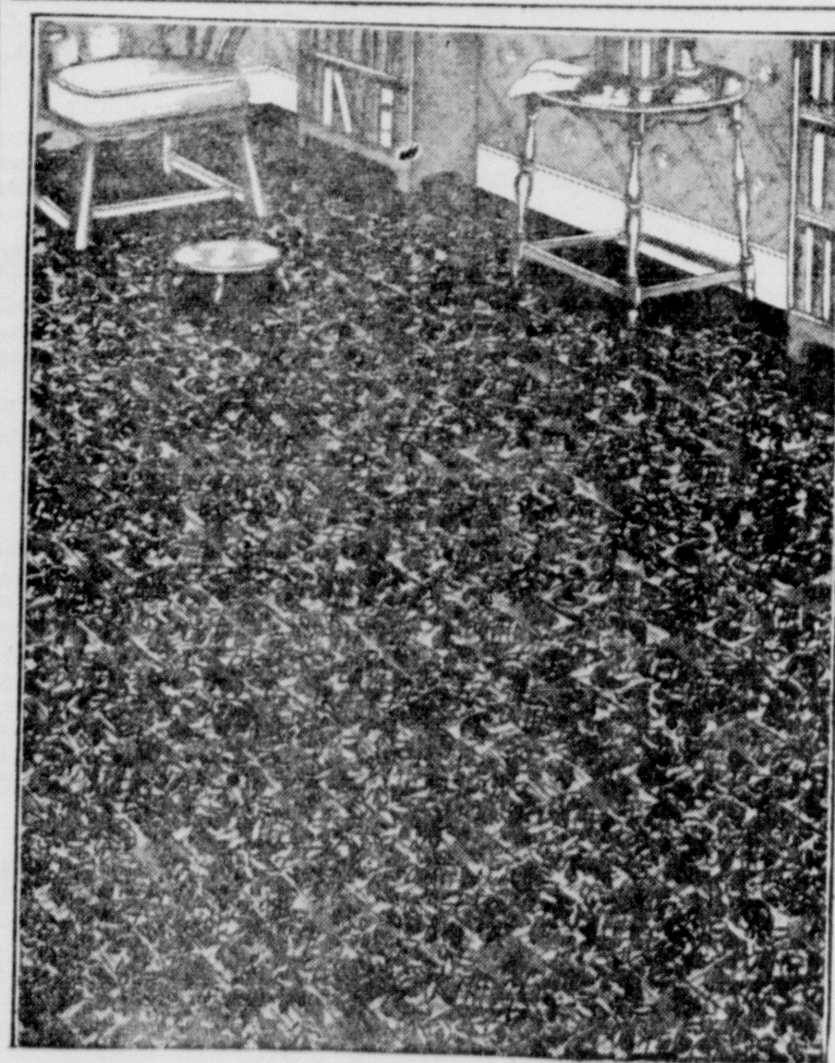

Keyserling said New England is one of the "soft spot" areas in the nation where unemployment has remained high despite a reduction in the national jobless figure from 4.7 million to 3.5 million this Spring.

HE SAID A careful study of New England economic problems would aid the government in coping with unemployment elsewhere in the country.

Arrangements for creation of "a temporary committee of experts on the New England economy" were made at a meeting in Boston last week of John D. Clark, vice chairman of the President's council, and 15 New England economists.

That session formulated two general questions to be answered by the New England study commission. They are:

1. What can be done by private initiative and federal, state and local governments, to solve the problem of "spot areas" of unemployment or declining industry?
2. What new industries and resources can be expanded in New England? How can they be developed most fully; what are the obstacles to be overcome in such fields as transportation, taxes, electric power, labor mobility, and provisions of capital.

By BILLY ROSE

The day before Oscar Hammerstein II left for London to wet-nurse the production of "Carousel" at the Drury Lane Theatre, we took a stroll in Central Park, and near the zoo we stopped to watch a couple of little girls who were skipping rope and chanting an old nursery rhyme:

"Lucy Locket lost her pocket Kitty Fisher found it . . ."

"If that jingle were called 'Bibbity Boo,' I said in my best professional manner, 'It would probably make the hit parade.'"

"As a matter of fact," said America's most successful lyricist, "it once did. Almost two hundred years ago under the name of 'Kitty Fisher's Jig' it was the most popular song in London. But if the mothers of those kids knew the facts about Miss Fisher, they'd wash their mouths out with soap. . . ."

According to Oscar, back in 1761 a heady hunk of gal by the name of Kitty Fisher hit London like the Kinsey Report, and before the year was out her list of boy friends included Admiral Anson, Britain's foremost sailor, and General Ligonier, the King's top soldier. A scribe of the period wrote her up as "the most pretty, witty, extravagant, wicked little light o' love that ever flourished," and as if that weren't enough the famous bachelor, Lord Pembroke, announced he would even commit matrimony for the delectable doxie.

The following year, when capricious Kitty skinned her pretty knees falling off a horse, the sedate Public Advertiser ran a long elegy to their dimples, and not long after one of her admirers wrote the Lucy Locket song which, under the title of "Kitty Fisher's Jig," became the "I'd Have Baked a Cake" of its day.

In 1766, when the devil-take-it damsel was anathema to almost every wife in England, she crossed everybody up by marrying John Norris, Jr., a young Member of Parliament from Kent who was more souse than statesman. His family promptly announced it was going to cut him off without a kipper, but Kitty, with her knowledge of human husbandry, did such a bang-up job of straightening him out that the Norrises relented and welcomed the couple to their hearts and hearth.

Unfortunately, a few months after she gave up other women's husbands to domesticate one of her own, Kitty upped and died. She was buried in the family vault with full honors, and so ended the saga of the trollop who went from minx to matron in five fast years.

By a nice twist, eight years after her death the jingle which bore her name became respectable too. A copy of "Kitty Fisher's Jig" found its way to Massachusetts where someone put new words to it, and it was sung around most of the better campfires during the American Revolution.

You've whistled it hundreds of times. It's called "Yankee Doodle."

Storm Blamed For Power Failure

COLUMBUS, May 16—An electrical storm was blamed today for a power failure in the Columbus traffic light system yesterday afternoon.

Several public address systems in the fire department engine houses were knocked out by lightning which hit a utility pole. Municipal light plant officials said the current was cut off when an oil switch was burned out at a power substation. Power was restored to the blacked-out areas in a short time.

The temperature dropped nine degrees as nearly half an inch of rain fell in the early afternoon storm.

The oldest operating light-house in the United States is at Sandy Hook, N. J. It was erected in 1764.

A scribe of the period wrote her up as "the most pretty, witty, extravagant, wicked little light o' love that ever flourished," and as if that weren't enough the famous bachelor, Lord Pembroke, announced he would even commit matrimony for the delectable doxie.

The following year, when capercous Kitty skinned her pretty knees falling off a horse, the sedate Public Advertiser ran a long elegy to their dimples, and not long after one of her admirers wrote the Lucy Locket song which, under the title of "Kitty Fisher's Jig," became the "I'd Have Baked a Cake" of its day.

In 1766, when the devil-take-it damsel was anathema to almost every wife in England, she crossed everybody up by marrying John Norris, Jr., a young Member of Parliament from Kent who was more souse than statesman. His family promptly announced it was going to cut him off without a kipper, but Kitty, with her knowledge of human husbandry, did such a bang-up job of straightening him out that the Norrises relented and welcomed the couple to their hearts and hearth.

Unfortunately, a few months after she gave up other women's husbands to domesticate one of her own, Kitty upped and died. She was buried in the family vault with full honors, and so ended the saga of the trollop who went from minx to matron in five years.

By a nice twist, eight years after her death the jingle which bore her name became respectable too. A copy of "Kitty Fisher's Jig" found its way to Massachusetts where someone put new words to it, and it was sung around most of the better campfires during the American Revolution.

You've whistled it hundreds of time. It's called "Yankee Doodle."

Storm Blamed For Power Failure

COLUMBUS, May 16—An electrical storm was blamed today for a power failure in the Columbus traffic light system yesterday afternoon.

Several public address systems in the fire department engine houses were knocked out by lightning which hit a utility pole. Municipal light plant officials said the current was cut off when an oil switch was burned out at a plant substation. Power was restored to the blacked-out areas in a short time.

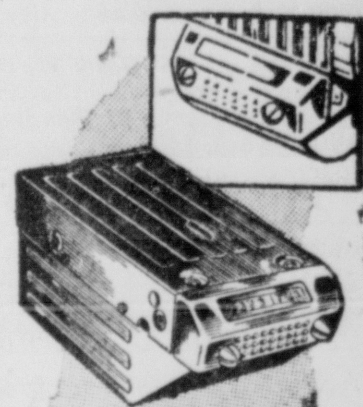

The temperature dropped nine degrees as nearly half an inch of rain fell in the early afternoon storm.

The oldest operating light-house in the United States is at Sandy Hook, N. J. It was erected in 1764.

LABOR UNITY PROSPECT

AN EXCHANGE of formal resolutions between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor appears to have set at rest for the time being the idea of a merger of the two into one huge labor group. Definite interest in the idea was apparent among some of the leaders of both groups, however, so it may be kept alive.

The interests of the public at large in such a merger would be hard to assess in advance. It would do away with jurisdictional disputes between rival organizers which now sometimes cause more trouble in an industry than a dispute with management might bring. It ought to reduce the inclination of large rival unions to compete with each other in obtaining apparent benefits for their workers, at the expense of production, the public and often of the workers as well.

On the other hand the bad results sometimes attributed to bigness in labor unions might be multiplied. Since a single organization would embrace almost all of the organized labor in the nation, the possibilities of paralyzing strikes and monopolistic control would be increased. In short, a merger of these two great organizations would enhance the effects of either good or bad courses. It would give selfish leadership much greater means for working harm to the nation's economy; it would provide wise leadership with a much more potent force to be applied toward obtaining a better life for workers.

MILLIONAIRE PEDDLER

HE WAS only a fruit peddler, with no car, radio or telephone, yet he gave the Boston Public Library $1,500,000. Now that John DeFerrari has died, leaving a sister as his only surviving relative, it is conceivable that the library may benefit further from his $4,000,000 estate.

Why did he choose the library as the beneficiary of his generosity? Because it was his school and his university. By reading there he learned the principles of investment that made him rich. Presumably also the attendants had received him courteously, not scorning his humble and even eccentric appearance.

There must be a moral here. Perhaps it is that DeFerrari learned more than just enough to assure his own success. He learned also that the successful have an obligation to help others along the road. What better way could he have found to do this?

These Days

When I first broke, to use a newspaper expression, the "Amerasia" case, I found a certain incredulity not only among readers but even among editors and politicians. Some felt that I was exaggerating a story; one even believed that having gone lazy, I stuck to a single idea.

Today, after four months, everybody is writing about "Amerasia" and it is admitted in Washington that this was the one sure and complete espionage case during the war available to the government. As one senator expressed it—a leading Democrat—it was handled like a cow kicking over a full pail of milk.

There are two ways of looking at this: one is to assume that everybody concerned with the case was treacherous and malicious and subversive. This I cannot and do not assume to be possible or true. Therefore, we must turn to the second explanation, which is:

Human beings live by their assumptions. These form their mental habits and control their actions. A new set of assumptions, altogether different, are subconsciously resisted as being beyond probability.

For instance, an American naturally assumes that no American would be a traitor to his country in time of war. When one is discovered, he is so horrible that shooting seems too good for him.

When we think of spies, we usually assume that they are aliens—perhaps with long hair and whiskers, or the mata hari type.

Therefore, it is difficult to believe that Americans of good families, educated in our best universities, even rich, would engage in treachery and espionage for a foreign power.

Were all this only a question as to what happened during World War II, one could assume that many Americans were so violently Anti-Nazi and Anti-Fascist that they believed that anything they did against the Nazi and the Fascist was morally justified. In this article, I am not discussing this view, indicating only that it existed.

However, our problems of treachery and espionage did not end with the war. They have been continuous since 1945; they are continuing today. J. Edgar Hoover has written magazine articles and has delivered speeches, clearly warning that they are continuing today. I am sure that Senator Tydings realizes better now than when he accepted the chairmanship of his committee that they are continuing today and that his committee faces something beyond Senator McCarthy's charges.

And it is clear to all those who are intimately concerned with the problem that picking off individuals will not help us too much. New individuals will take their place. Our laws are so designed—because we had not expected that such a weapon would be used against us—that the subversive really has a legal right to be subversive.

The need then is for definitions that will respond to the challenge of the forces that Marxism has let loose.

For instance, what is a Communist? Legally, a Communist is a member of the Communist Party who admits such membership and carries a card.

DIET AND HEALTH

An Infection of the Mouth

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

LIKE other parts of the body, the mouth is subject to various types of infection. Perhaps the best known of these is trench mouth, which causes soreness of the gums, tongue, and even of the lining membrane of the cheeks, along with the formation of painful ulcers or sores. There is usually a bad odor to the breath and, in severe cases, the patient may have fever.

While the exact cause of this disorder is not known, it has been found that in most cases two germs are present, one known as the spirillum of Vincent, and the other the spirillum of Durey. Some authorities believe that possibly the condition is due to a virus infection.

Much Alike

Trench mouth and another disorder known as acute ulcerative gingivitis are much alike. In the latter disorder there are also ulcers, particularly on the gums. This condition, too, is due to an infection.

Both acute ulcerative gingivitis and trench mouth are treated with so-called antibiotics, such as penicillin.

Some patients, however, have proved sensitive to penicillin and,

for this reason, treatment with aureomycin has been tried recently.

Fifteen cases of ulcerative gingivitis were treated with aureomycin, given by mouth, and rapid healing of the sores on the gums took place.

Red Gums

It is also noted that, with the aureomycin, more rapid lessening of the redness of the gums occurred.

With the aureomycin treatment, sometimes such symptoms as sickness of the stomach, vomiting, and diarrhea developed. However, it is fortunate that these symptoms can be controlled by giving whole liver extract.

Mouth infections not only may be most uncomfortable but also may be responsible for the spread of infection to other parts of the body; hence, when they occur they should be treated promptly. It is fortunate that most of them will respond rapidly to the antibiotics, such as aureomycin and penicillin.

National Pickle Week starts Thursday but you are not supposed to wire congratulations to anyone for getting us into it.

And you are not expected to send pickles to your best friends.

According to pickle scholars, Cleopatra was a dill-devotee although history seems to indicate she was more on the sweet and mixed side.

We are also told that Caesar, Tiberius and Queen Elizabeth were pickle fans. . . no pre-rents are listed although one puckers easily when crossed.

All I know about pickles is they provide a good way to dispose of cucumbers for people who don't like cucumbers.

Now if some genius will find a way to pickle a potato. . .

SYNOPSIS

Eliza Forrestal relinquishes a European luxury-life with her frivolous mother, to take over management of her late grandfather's small antiquated paper mill in New Hampshire. As an "outsider" here she is regarded with suspicion. She has a powerful secret enemy in Sly George Culbert, now running the mill and hated by his men. Sly Hespeth, her housekeeper, and Annie Wilson, an old family friend, prove loyal to her. Culbert dishonestly schemes to sell the mill to a big paper combine. Out on a wooded trail, Eliza reviews her life past and present, determines to fight on. It is here that Chris Cameron, the gentleman "hermit," first finds her. She dismisses his offers of help and friendship coldly.

CHAPTER TEN

FROM a window Annie Wilson had seen Eliza drive past toward the mill and then back again. Nice looking, she'd thought, warmly. Robert's girl! And she had felt the familiar little catch at her heart.

Now she was out in her front yard, turning the ground in her borders along the walk where every spring she planted petunias.

She watched for Tod as she worked. It was past time for him to be home from school. He was in the second year of High at Cranford, going in the morning on the milk truck and hitch-hiking back in the afternoon. Annie was proud of his going to the High in Cranford. Dave hadn't seen it much use, Tod's going, but she'd stuck to it. Tod wasn't one to study—it had been the chance to get into the school orchestra that had persuaded him to go—but she'd kept him at his homework and his reports were good, or pretty good. Only, the last week or so, he'd been late getting home, as he was tonight. She didn't like to think he might be hanging around places in Cranford he shouldn't be.

She wanted him to get home before Dave did and it was time for Dave, now. Though, likely, Dave'd stop by at the store with some of the others to talk about the girl going to the mill, the very first day.

She had time, with all her watching and hoeing and thinking, to enjoy the smell of the fresh-turned earth, of the pulpwood over in the mill yard, of—yes, baking. "Zanie Matthews is late today getting her bread out!" Then she saw Chris Cameron coming along, and waved to him.

He stopped at the little gate in the low white-painted picket fence which Dave had built for Annie. "Petunias again?"

"Yes. I think they sort of invite you in, don't you?"

Chris agreed, smiling, thinking that it wasn't only the petunias. "Your ground ready?" asked Annie.

She did not share the opinion of some that Chris was a queer chap to bother with flowers up at his place. She did not think him queer because he lived alone off there in the Notch. She had a normal amount of curiosity about everything around her but it was always tempered with kindness and she did not think, as some had, when Chris first came, that maybe he was hiding from something or someone. She had thought, those first months, that he was getting over some lung trouble.

She'd spoken of it to him one day: "I was thinking maybe you'd been sick, Mr. Cameron."

"I guess you could say I was,

Mrs. Wilson. But I'm getting better."

Annie had known by something in his tone that it wasn't a sickness of the body.

"The girl's here," she told Chris, now, a little excitedly.

"I've just come from there."

"I saw her drive by—she looks young for all that responsibility. Nice looking," Annie added.

Chris said, with a half-smile, "Yes, she is young for what she's taking on. And nice looking."

Annie had turned her glance up to the face of the big house on the hill, her soft brown eyes concerned. "Think she'll get lonely up there? Hespeth isn't one to talk much and she's likely used to folks around her."

Chris said, "I rather think she's lonely right now—scared, too."

"I'll go up and see her," said Annie simply. "I'd like to be friends with her."

Chris said quickly, "That'd be fine. She's going to need friends, I'm afraid. How's the kid?" he asked then.

Annie's smooth face took on a slightly worried look. "He's late tonight. It's the third afternoon this week he's been late. He could have had his algebra done before supper." She turned and looked down the road and gave a little relieved cry. "There he is now!"

A boy, too tall for his age, too thin, came shambling up the road, stopping now and then to kick a stone out of his path.

Chris lifted his hand to Annie and went on his way. "Hi, Tod," he said to the boy as he passed him outside the gate. "Hi," mumbled Tod from some deep place in his throat.

"You're late," said Annie to Tod, but not in a scolding way. She wanted to kiss him, there where his freckles ran into his tousled sandy hair, but she knew better.

"Orchestra practice," muttered the boy, going through the gate and past her.

Annie sighed a little as she followed him, her spade over one shoulder. That was going to come up again, the boy's taking some lessons. He could play second violin in the orchestra first sometime, and maybe a solo in the school entertainments, if he had some more lessons. He'd told them that one night at supper, a few weeks back, and Dave had got all worked up over it. "Where'd it get you if you did learn to play a fiddle?" he'd asked indignantly.

Dave had tied it all with the nonsense of Tod's going in to High, when he could start in the mill.

But Annie wanted him to learn to play his fiddle well.

She would remember always the utter niceness of those evenings, two winters ago, three there were, when old Eliza had come to their house and Tod had played for him. Old Eliza had seemed to like it; he'd sat in the platform rocker, all relaxed, a sort of far-off look on his face, and when the boy stopped one thing, he'd said, "Play some more." Tod had played everything he knew. Not well, Annie had to admit, for he'd picked it all out for himself by ear, but it had sounded nice. Listening, she'd let her memory go back to Robert.

"I guess you could say I was,

her memory go back to Robert.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—Well, if the spring has made your pores tremble a little and you are contemplating a visit to the big town, one of the things you will want to know is what to see in the theater that's any good.

That's one of the last things that New York has, these days, that's hard to duplicate in other cities. The last time I checked the lists, we had 30 flesh-and-blood—in person and not a movie—shows on the boards. In other cities, even big ones like Chicago, they have a tough time keeping two or three going. The ironic thing, of course, is that the people who go to the shows in New York are chiefly out-of-towners.

Rumbling along in its second year is South Pacific and it would be nice if you could get tickets to it, but you can't. There are no ifs, ands or buts. If you want to see Katharine Hepburn in tights—and anybody who saw Cary Grant step on the train of Hepburn's dress in Bringing Up Baby will want to—she's doing As You Like It, at the Cort.

The best acting in town is by Shirley Booth in a fair play called Come Back, Little Sheba and if you liked I Remember Mama there's a play called The Happy Time that's full of clichés but boasts the presence of Claude Dauphin, the great French actor who was so impressive a few years ago in No Exit.

Ray Bolger goes on and on in Where's Charley? I hear he's taking singing lessons because his nightly croaking was ruining his larynx. If you remember Walter Hampden hamming it up in Cyrano years ago, you will be startled at the restraint of his performance in The Velvet Glove.

The most talented woman in town is Pearl Bailey, who is in Arms and the Girl and is doubling in one of the downtown saloons. Pearl has a record called That's Good Enough for Me which surely will last in history as long as Chopin's Nocturne.

The movie houses are pretty empty, so if you find yourself with a spare hour or two, during your visit, you won't have any trouble,

Bob Hope packed the Paramount during his recent visit, but that was a freak. There are a lot of good movies in town, like The Astonished Heart and The Third Man and The Fallen Idol, and also a lot of stinkers.

If you've never been to Radio City Music Hall, you must visit it, of course; it is the cathedral among New York movie houses and somehow it seems virtually unholy to exhibit films in it. Along 42nd street between Broadway and Eighth avenue we have the Music Hall's exact opposites—the down-at-the-heel, fifth-run houses.

THERE'S NO NEED TO BRIEF YOU ON CARNEGIE or Town Hall's musical attractions; if you're a lover of the symphonic, you know by now just where you're going when you come to N. Y. and what you're going to hear. The Metropolitan Opera will be shut down but over at the City Center in West 55th street the New York City Opera company is hard at work.

All the museums are going full blast. Give my best to the stuffed whale hanging from the ceiling in the Museum of Natural History. Night clubs—we gotta thousand of them. Sometimes it seems that all Broadway is one big night club, or orange-drink stand.

It's a reasonably good bet that the Copacabana will have a good show when you arrive—Sinatra—and Herbert Jacoby's Blue Angel always has a handful of fresh and good young talent. El Morocco is, of course, El Morocco, the place to go. The Greenwich Village joints have deteriorated a bit, but they still raffle off some good Dixieland jazz at Eddie Condon's and Nick's saloons.

I couldn't begin to tell you where to eat, but if it's swank you want, you'd better lunch at the Colony and dine at Chambord. The food's good, too. The best hamburgers in town are at Twenty-One, but they masquerade as chopped sirloin steak and they cost the better part of a theater ticket. If you can get into Twenty-One. The ham steak and eggs at Dinty Moore's are fine and if it gets warm, you owe yourself a breakfast at the Tavern-on-the-Green in Central Park, to the accompaniment of thundering hooves on the adjacent bridge path. Generally speaking, don't eat in night clubs. On second thought, if you have to be told that, you aren't adult enough to be reading this pillar of intellectual attainment.

MAYBE THE BEST ADVICE IS NOT TO SPEND too much time eating, night clubbing or theater-going—but to get out and wander around the streets and let the New York atmosphere wash over you. This is a city with the same rough effect as Paris or London or San Francisco; it is like no place in the world and unless you have some of its elusive charm rub off on you, you have wasted your fortnight.

It would be a shame for you to go home and remember Manhattan merely as the place where you saw Mary Martin wash her hair onstage, much as I love Mary.

An Infection of the Mouth

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

LIKE other parts of the body, the mouth is subject to various types of infection. Perhaps the best known of these is trench mouth, which causes soreness of the gums, tongue, and even of the lining membrane of the cheeks, along with the formation of painful ulcers or sores. There is usually a bad odor to the breath and, in severe cases, the patient may have fever.

While the exact cause of this disorder is not known, it has been found that in most cases two germs are present, one known as the spirillum of Vincent, and the other the spirillum of Dugway. Some authorities believe that possibly the condition is due to a virus infection.

Much Alike

Trench mouth and another disorder known as acute ulcerative gingivitis are much alike. In the latter disorder there are also ulcers, particularly on the gums. This condition, too, is due to an infection.

Both acute ulcerative gingivitis and trench mouth are treated with so-called antibiotics, such as penicillin.

Some patients, however, have proved sensitive to penicillin and,

for this reason, treatment with aureomycin has been tried recently.

Fifteen cases of ulcerative gingivitis were treated with aureomycin, given by mouth, and rapid healing of the sores on the gums took place.

Red Gums

It is also noted that, with the aureomycin, more rapid lessening of the redness of the gums occurred.

With the aureomycin treatment, sometimes such symptoms as sickness of the stomach, vomiting, and diarrhea developed. However, it is fortunate that these symptoms can be controlled by giving whole liver extract.

Mouth infections not only may be most uncomfortable but also may be responsible for the spread of infection to other parts of the body; hence, when they occur they should be treated promptly. It is fortunate that most of them will respond rapidly to the antibiotics, such as aureomycin and penicillin.

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

National Pickle Week starts Thursday but you are not supposed to wire congratulations to anyone for getting us into it.

And you are not expected to send pickles to your best friends.

According to pickle scholars, Cleopatra was a dill-devotee although history seems to indicate she was more on the sweet and mixed side.

We are also told that Caesar, Tiberius and Queen Elizabeth were pickle fans. . . no presidents are listed although one puckers easily when crossed.

All I know about pickles is they provide a good way to dispose of cucumbers for people who don't like cucumbers.

Now if some genius will find a way to pickle a potato. . .

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

Eliza Forrestal relinquishes a European luxury-life with her frivolous mother, to take over management of her late grandfather's small antiquated paper mill in New Hampshire. As an "outsider" here she is regarded with suspicion. She has a powerful secret enemy in Mr. George Culbert, now running the mill and hated by his men. But Hespeth, her housekeeper, and Annie Wilson, an old family friend, prove loyal to her. Culbert dishonestly schemes to sell the mill to a big paper combine. Out on a wooded trail, Eliza reviews her life past and present, determines to fight on. It is here that Mrs. Cameron, the gentleman "hermit," first finds her. She dismisses his offers of help and friendship coldly.

CHAPTER TEN

FROM a window Annie Wilson had seen Eliza drive past toward the mill and then back again. Nice looking, she'd thought, warmly. Robert's girl! And she had felt the familiar little catch at her heart.

Now she was out in her front yard, turning the ground in her borders along the walk where every spring she planted petunias. She watched for Tod as she worked. It was past time for him to be home from school. He was in the second year of High at Cranford, going in the morning on the milk truck and hitch-hiking back in the afternoon. Annie was proud of his going to the High in Cranford. Dave hadn't seen it much use, Tod's going, but she'd stuck to it. Tod wasn't one to study—it had been the chance to get into the school orchestra that had persuaded him to go—but she'd kept him at his homework and his reports were good, or pretty good. Only, the last week or so, he'd been late getting home, as he was tonight. She didn't like to think he might be hanging around places in Cranford he shouldn't be.

She wanted him to get home before Dave did and it was time for Dave, now. Though, likely, Dave'd stop by at the store with some of the others to talk about the girl going to the mill, the very first day.

She had time, with all her watching and hoeing and thinking, to enjoy the smell of the fresh-turned earth, of the pulpwood over in the mill yard, of—yes, baking. "Zanie Matthews is late today getting her bread out!" Then she saw Chris Cameron coming along, and waved to him.

He stopped at the little gate in the low white-painted picket fence which Dave had built for Annie. "Petunias again?"

"Yes, I think they sort of invite you in, don't you?"

Chris agreed, smiling, thinking that it wasn't only the petunias. "Your ground ready?" asked Annie.

She did not share the opinion of some that Chris was a queer chap to bother with flowers up at his place. She did not think him queer because he lived alone out there in the Notch. She had a normal amount of curiosity about everything around her but it was always tempered with kindness and she did not think, as some had, when Chris first came, that maybe he was hiding from something or someone. She had thought, those first months, that he was getting over some lung trouble.

She'd spoken of it to him one day: "I was thinking maybe you'd been sick, Mr. Cameron."

"I guess you could say I was,"

But Annie wanted him to learn to play his fiddle well.

She would remember always the utter niceness of those evenings, two winters ago, three there were, when old Eliza had come to their house and Tod had played for him. Old Eliza had seemed to like it; he'd sat in the platform rocker, all relaxed, a sort of far-off look on his face, and when the boy stopped one thing, he'd said, "Play some more." Tod had played everything he knew. Not well, Annie had to admit, for he'd picked it all out for himself by ear, but it had sounded nice. Listening, she'd let her memory go back to Robert,

Mrs. Wilson. But I'm getting better."

Annie had known by something in his tone that it wasn't a sickness of the body.

"The girl's here," she told Chris, now, a little excitedly.

"I've just come from up there,"

"I saw her drive by—she looks young for all that responsibility. Nice looking," Annie added.

Chris said, with a half-smile, "Yes, she is young for what she's taking on. And nice looking."

Annie had turned her glance up to the face of the big house on the hill, her soft brown eyes concerned. "Think she'll get lonely up there? Hespeth isn't one to talk much and she's likely used to folks around her!"

Chris said, "I rather think she's lonely right now—scared, too."

"I'll go up and see her," said Annie simply. "I'd like to be friends with her."

Annie's smooth face took on a slightly worried look. "He's late tonight! It's the third afternoon this week he's been late. He could have had his algebra done before supper." She turned and looked down the road and gave her little relieved cry. "There he is now!"

A boy, too tall for his age, too thin, came shambling up the road, stopping now and then to kick a stone out of his path.

Chris lifted his hand to Annie and went on his way. "Hi, Tod," he said to the boy as he passed him outside the gate. "Hi," mumbled Tod from some deep place in his throat.

"You're late," said Annie to Tod, but not in a scolding way. She wanted to kiss him, there where his freckles ran into his tousled sandy hair, but she knew better.

"Orchestra practice," muttered the boy, going through the gate and past her.

Annie sighed a little as she followed him, her spade over one shoulder. That was going to come up again, the boy's taking some lessons. He could play second violin in the orchestra, first some time, and maybe a solo in the school entertainments, if he had some more lessons. He'd told them that one night at supper, a few weeks back, and Dave had got all worked up over it. "Where'd it get you if you did learn to play a fiddle?" he'd asked indignantly. Dave had tied it all with the nonsense of Tod's going in to High, when he could start in the mill.

But Annie wanted him to learn to play his fiddle well.

She would remember always the utter niceness of those evenings, two winters ago, three there were, when old Eliza had come to their house and Tod had played for him. Old Eliza had seemed to like it; he'd sat in the platform rocker, all relaxed, a sort of far-off look on his face, and when the boy stopped one thing, he'd said, "Play some more." NEW YORK—Well, if the spring has made your pores tremble a little and you are contemplating a visit to the big town, one of the things you will want to know is what to see in the theater that's any good.

That's one of the last things that New York has, these days, that's hard to duplicate in other cities. The last time I checked the lists, we had 30 flesh-and-blood—in person and not a movie—shows on the boards. In other cities, even big ones like Chicago, they have a tough time keeping two or three going. The ironic thing, of course, is that the people who go to the shows in New York are chiefly out-of-towners.

Rumbling along in its second year is South Pacific and it would be nice if you could get tickets to it, but you can't. There are no ifs, ands or buts. If you want to see Katharine Hepburn in tights—and anybody who saw Cary Grant step on the train of Hepburn's dress in Bringing Up Baby will want to—she's doing As You Like It, at the Cort.

The best acting in town is by Shirley Booth in a fair play called Come Back, Little Sheba and if you liked I Remember Mama there's a play called The Happy Time that's full of clichés but boasts the presence of Claude Dauphin, the great French actor who was so impressive a few years ago in No Exit.

Ray Bolger goes on and on in Where's Charley? I hear he's taking singing lessons because his nightly croaking was ruining his larynx. If you remember Walter Hampden humming it up in Cyrano years ago, you will be started at the restraint of his performance in The Velvet Glove.

The most talented woman in town is Pearl Bailey, who is in Arms and the Girl and is doubling in one of the downtown saloons. Pearl has a record called That's Good Enough for Me which surely will last in history as long as Chopin's Nocturne.

The movie houses are pretty empty, so if you find yourself with a spare hour or two, during your visit, you won't have any trouble.

Bob Hope packed the Paramount during his recent visit, but that was a break. There are a lot of good movies in town, like The Astonished Heart and The Third Man and The Fallen Idol, and also a lot of stinkers.

If you've never been to Radio City Music Hall, you must visit it, of course; it is the cathedral among New York movie houses and somehow it seems virtually unholy to exhibit films in it. Along 42nd street between Broadway and Eighth avenue we have the Music Hall's exact opposites—the down-at-the-heel, fifth-run houses.

THERE'S NO NEED TO BRIEF YOU ON CARNEGIE or Town Hall's musical attractions; if you're a lover of the symphonic, you know by now just where you're going when you come to N. Y. and what you're going to hear. The Metropolitan Opera will be shut down but over at the City Center in West 55th street the New York City Opera company is hard at work.

All the museums are going full blast. Give my best to the stuffed whale hanging from the ceiling in the Museum of Natural History. Night clubs—we gotta thousand of them. Sometimes it seems that all Broadway is one big night club, or orange-drink stand.

It's a reasonably good bet that the Copacabana will have a good show when you arrive—Sinatra—and Herbert Jacoby's Blue Angel always has a handful of fresh and good young talent. El Morocco is, of course, El Morocco; the place to go. The Greenwich Village joints have deteriorated a bit, but they still raffie off some good Dixieland jazz at Eddie Condon's and Nick's saloons.

I couldn't begin to tell you where to eat, but if it's swank you want, you'd better lunch at the Colony and dine at Chambers. The food's good, too. The best hamburgers in town are at Twenty-One, but they masquerade as chopped sirloin steak and they cost the better part of a theater ticket. If you can get into Twenty-One.

The ham steak and eggs at Dinty Moore's are fine and if it gets warm, you owe yourself a breakfast at the Tavern-on-the-Green in Central Park, to the accompaniment of thudding horses' hooves on the adjacent bridge path. Generally speaking, don't eat in night clubs. On second thought, if you have to be told that, you aren't adult enough to be reading this pillar of intellectual attainment.

MAYBE THE BEST ADVICE IS NOT TO SPEND too much time eating, night clubbing or theater-going—but to get out and wander around the streets and let the New York atmosphere wash over you. This is a city with the same rough effect as Paris or London or San Francisco; it is like no place in the world and unless you have some of its elusive charm rub off on you, you have wasted your fortnight.

It would be a shame for you to go home and remember Manhattan merely as the place where you saw Mary Martin wash her hair onstage, much as I love Mary.

American Soldiers Enter Japan Training Program

CAMP MCGILL, Japan, May 16—American troops in Japan were launched Monday upon a three-month program of intensive training for overseas landing operations.

High-ranking U. S. Army, Navy and Air Force officers attended the opening exercises at Camp McGill.

The program is designed to give at least one battalion of each American Army division in Japan special training in amphibious warfare.

Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, chief of staff to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, told the initial class of trainees:

"You are all familiar with the situation in the world today which punctuates the special importance of doing your job well."

HE ASSURED the men of Gen. MacArthur's "interest in and unqualified support of" the training program. Gen. Almond pointed out that Gen. MacArthur "has more experience, over a longer period, of amphibious warfare than any other commander in the Army."

He said he would "try to get him (MacArthur) here to see you land" when the first class of trainees graduates in June.

Gen. Almond emphasized that recent maneuvers of the American armed forces demonstrated that the atomic bomb "has not displaced ground troops or amphibious operations."

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Air Force commander in Japan, also addressed the men, telling them the training upon which they were embarking would be "all-important to us in the event of an emergency."

Navy Commander Vice Adm. C. T. Joy revealed to the trainees that he is assigning a general command ship, an attack transport, an attack cargo vessel, an LST, an LSU and two destroyers to the program.

Popularity Brings Delay In Wedding Plans

BAD GLEICHENBERG Austria, May 16—Sam Hedge, the 60-year-old Chicago chef who won the love of a 29-year-old Austrian beauty, found his personal popularity delaying his marriage plans Monday.

Ever since he arrived in Bad Gleichenberg on April 28 to marry Bridget Rauch, the amiable great-grandfather has been making friends.

This now has interfered with the plans of Mama Johanna and Papa Karl to hold a small wedding on June 3.

To avoid giving offense they have to hold a large wedding to accommodate Hedge's legion of friends. Hedge's interpreter says:

"They (the Rauchs) are farm people. They don't want to put or airs.

"And they are afraid keeping it small would offend the hundreds who are waiting for the marriage.

"So with wedding-day fast approaching, it is still a toss-up. Sam has been gracious beyond words so far. He'll probably solve the problem by quietly slipping off with Bridget to Rome or Vienna."

The confidence in Hedge's ability to solve the problem and make Bridget one of the world's youngest great-grandmothers, is shared by most of Bad Gleichenberg.

A 60-year-old man who woos and wins a fair maid 31 years his junior by passionate letters and Transatlantic telephone calls is considered a certainty to conquer the latest obstacle.

KATHERINE KOSMAK, the U. S. embassy employee whose romance in Prague with a Czech employee of the embassy caused a diplomatic stir, arrives in New York home, where she is spending a few days before reporting to the State department in Washington. She said Czech secret police tried to exploit her romance with Ivan Albl — to force her to misrepresent aims of the U. S. information service. (International)

Film Star Is Injured

HOLLYWOOD, May 16 — The efforts of Jimmy Cagney to kill a coyote came to an unhappy ending that jeopardized the film star's life early yesterday, but he suffered only a minor hand wound.

The accident occurred when the .22 calibre rifle with which he hoped to shoot the coyote discharged accidentally as he tripped and fell in the darkness of the back yard at his Coldwater Canyon home.

Cagney told officers a coyote had been disturbing his boxer dogs for some days and that, when he heard the animal howl shortly after midnight, he grabbed the rifle to shoot the beast.

The gun discharged as he sprawled headlong when he stumbled in the yard.

Cagney was treated at home by a private physician.

No one in the United States fully fits that definition.

In the first place, there are no cards.

Secondly, only a small number of party members are permitted by party discipline to admit that they are party members. The party in the United States is largely underground.

Thirdly, while all Communists are by their own rules and disciplines agents of a foreign power, most Communists are not actively engaged in espionage. In fact, those who are so engaged are separated from the American Communist Party and can truthfully say they do not belong to it.

Fourthly, we emphasize the phrase "overthrow of the American government by force." This is an inaccurate oversimplification to fit American assumptions and legal phraseology.

A more correct statement would be "to take over the American government by whatever means may be available, infiltration, participation, office-holding or force."

I cite these few examples to indicate how intricate the problem is. The "Amerasia" case itself is not overwhelmingly important. It is, however, an index to a pattern, just as the Hiss, the Coplon and the Fuchs cases are indices to the same pattern.

Therefore, it is the pattern that we need to describe. That can only be done by first getting our definitions absolutely right. The problem is too serious to be used for partisan politics.

Film Star Is Injured

HOLLYWOOD, May 16 — The efforts of Jimmy Cagney to kill a coyote came to an unhappy ending that jeopardized the film star's life early yesterday, but he suffered only a minor hand wound.

The accident occurred when the .22 calibre rifle with which he hoped to shoot the coyote discharged accidentally as he tripped and fell in the darkness of the back yard at his Coldwater Canyon home.

Cagney told officers a coyote had been disturbing his boxer dogs for some days and that, when he heard the animal howl shortly after midnight, he grabbed the rifle to shoot the beast.

The gun discharged as he sprawled headlong when he stumbled in the yard.

Cagney was treated at home by a private physician.

In the first place, there are no cards.

Secondly, only a small number of party members are permitted by party discipline to admit that they are party members. The party in the United States is largely underground.

Thirdly, while all Communists are by their own rules and disciplines agents of a foreign power, most Communists are not actively engaged in espionage. In fact, those who are so engaged are separated from the American Communist Party and can truthfully say they do not belong to it.

Fourthly, we emphasize the phrase "overthrow of the American government by force." This is an inaccurate oversimplification to fit American assumptions and legal phraseology.

A more correct statement would be "to take over the American government by whatever means may be available, infiltration, participation, office-holding or force."

I cite these few examples to indicate how intricate the problem is. The "Amerasia" case itself is not overwhelmingly important. It is, however, an index to a pattern, just as the Hiss, the Coplon and the Fuchs cases are indices to the same pattern.

Therefore, it is the pattern that we need to describe. That can only be done by first getting our definitions absolutely right. The problem is too serious to be used for partisan politics.

Japanese Culture Explained In Talk

"In Japan, the culture is ancient, but in America, the culture is being made in everyday life."

This was the appraisal of the difference between culture in the land of the setting sun and that found in these United States.

Appraiser was a native of Japan, Mrs. Michio Nagi, who, with her husband, is studying in Ohio State university.

She appeared before Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday evening in Pickaway Country Club as the local civic group paid honor to its members' mothers.

Mrs. Nagi was brought to the club meeting by Dr. E. E. Lewis of the college of education, Ohio State.

Dr. Lewis, who assisted the Japanese in setting up a democratic school system in the early postwar years, gave a general resume of Japanese culture, but Mrs. Nagi stole the whole show.

UNABLE to speak English when she arrived in America last July, the bright-eyed Japanese woman nevertheless was able to clearly express herself Monday evening.

She explained that Japanese culture is deep-rooted, goes back many generations. Nearly all cultures now found in Japan are more than 1,000 years old. Dr. Lewis injected that he had found manuscripts in Mrs. Nagi's home city which were 1,600 years old. He said:

"These evidences of high culture in Japan dated back to when the present American's ancestors were mere barbarians somewhere in Europe."

Mrs. Nagi quipped that some changes in everyday practices are due when she and her husband return to Japan in another year. She said that the custom of her country dictates that a wife shall be "obedient and silent" before her husband and before her husband's family.

A Japanese husband never enters a kitchen, never assists with any household work. She said:

"My husband and I, since living in America, have decided that we will return home and teach Japanese men how to wash dishes."

Dressed in an oriental kimono which her mother had made, Mrs. Nagi explained that she had been home she could not have worn it. She declared that the brightly-colored costume was that of a single Japanese girl, that married Japanese women wear dark colors.

SHE DISPLAYED the kimono's long sleeves, said they denoted a single woman. A married woman's kimono has short sleeves. The Japanese bride wears no wedding ring, the sleeves being the tell-tale bit of evidence on marital status. But she said:

"I wear this gay kimono anyhow—this is a democratic country."

As a part of her presentation, Mrs. Nagi gave an Oriental dance and sang one song.

In his address, Dr. Lewis traced the origin of Japan's culture and told of that nation's problems in the postwar era. He word-penciled in the background that Japan's size is that of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois combined, that only 20 percent of its area is available to croplands, that its population is about 81 million, that population is increasing about one million a year.

The OSU professor declared that this rapid increase in population is due to one of Japan's basic cultures—the family. The Japanese love children, practice Shintoism—worship of ancestors.

He declared that "the Western World's effort to Christianize the Japanese is slow because of this family worship." He added: "The Japanese are like the floss-floss bird—a creature which slowly moves forward, stumbling because it always is looking back over its shoulder."

HE DECLARED that during the postwar era, under American occupation which nearly all Japanese is slow because of this family worship. He added: "The Japanese are like the floss-floss bird—a creature which slowly moves forward, stumbling because it always is looking back over its shoulder."

1. It has its own people's congress, has done away with rule by the emperor and by singular classes.
2. It has emancipated woman, giving her the right to vote and be equal with the male.
3. It has a free educational system with grades running from kindergarten through the university. The first nine grades are compulsory.
All this in spite of the fact that Japan must import nearly all of its needs, that no nation will lend Japan a nickel, and that the yen has dropped in value from three to one American dollar since the Fall of 1945 to the present ratio of 360 to $1.

WITH HAPPY smiles, actress Joan Caulfield and film producer Frank Ross cut their wedding cake at home of Mr. and Mrs. Armand Deutsch in Beverly Hills, Cal. Mrs. Deutsch is the former Benay Venuta. (International)

Obituary

Peter Henry Thyrkacre

We are called to bow in humble submission to the will of God. For death has again entered and called from this life a loved one. Sleeping quietly and drifting out into the unknown to bid good morning to his loved ones who have gone on before him.
Peter Henry Thyrkacre, son of Frederick and Margaret Weimer Thyrkacre, was born in Columbus, Ohio and departed this life from his home in Walnut Township, Pickaway County, May 6, 1950 at the age of 61 years, 16 months and 17 days.
He was converted and united with the East Ringold Evangelical United Brethren Church April 9, 1944 and from that time forward was a zealous worker for his Lord and his Church. He will be sadly missed by his Church. He was also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the International Machinists.
He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hines, a son, Irvin, three sisters, Mrs. Katherine Pink, Mrs. Mary Pfannebecker, and Mrs. Louise Fien, three brothers, Francis, John and Fred, two grandchildren, all of Columbus. His next friends John, Mary and Anna Kaiser of the home that he graciously cared for him during his illness.

The family wishes to thank Doctor R. H. Hocker, Dr. H. H. Hocker, William and Edith Strehle, the pallbearers, Rev. Carl Butterbaugh, all who sent flowers, and the neighbors who helped in the funeral. Special thanks to the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ladies Aid Society of the East Ringold Church for their helpfulness.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Paul Smith and sons wish all their friends, relatives and neighbors to know how much their kindness has meant to them. They appreciate the services of the Rev. Clinger, the singers, the Deffenbaugh Funeral Home, special thanks to the employees and some patrons of Court-Main restaurant who were so kind during their recent bereavement, the death of the husband and father, that Paul Smith.

Obituary

Peter Henry Thirlyre
We are called to bow in humble submission to the will of God. For death has again entered and called from our midst a loved one. Sleeping quietly and drifting out into the unknown. He died this morning to his loved ones who have gone on before.

Peter Henry Thirlyre, son of Frederick and Margaret Weimer Thirlyre was born in Columbus Ohio and departed this life from his home in Walnut Township, Pickaway County, May 15, 1950 at the age of 61 years, 16 months and 17 days.

He was converted and united with the East Ringgold Evangelical United Brethren Church April 9, 1944 and from that time forward was a zealous worker for his Lord and his Church. He will be sadly missed by his Church. He was also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the International Machinery.

He is survived by a daughter Mrs. Margaret Hines, a son Irvin, three sisters, Mrs. Katherine Fink, Mrs. Mary Plambeck, and Mrs. Louise Fien, three brothers Francis, John and Fred, two grandchildren, all of Columbus. His next friends, John, Mary and Anna Kaiser of the home that so graciously cared for him during his illness.

The family wishes to thank Doctor R. S. Hostler, Mr. Deffenbaugh, William and Edith Strehle, the pallbearers, Rev. Carl Butterbaugh, all who sent flowers, and the neighbors and friends that have been so kind. Also the Ladies Aid Society of the East Ringgold Church for their helpfulness.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Paul Smith and sons wish all their friends, relatives and neighbors to know how much their kindness has meant to them. They appreciate the services of the Rev. Clinger, the singers, the Deffenbaugh Funeral Home, special thanks to employees and some patrons of Court-Main restaurant who were so kind during their recent bereavement, the death of the husband and father, the late Paul Smith.

TERMITES

Cause damage in excess of fifty million dollars annually for REPAIRS alone. These destructive pests work in secret and may be destroying your property NOW. Have it inspected by an expert and be sure. There is no charge for the inspection, and if your property is not infested they will tell you so. If termites are present you will be SHOWN and a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.

Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators"—"part time" entomologists offer fantastic "guaranteed" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.

An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the ground outside the house, from returning.

The almost unbelievable cunning of the termite makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment.

Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no one STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.

Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.

We are local representatives of a reputable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company who are ACCREDITED MEMBERS OF THE OHIO PEST CONTROL ASSOCIATION.

SEVEN SCHOOLS ENTERED

Huge List Compiled For All-County Meet

A huge list of entries has been compiled for the 1950 All-County track meet, scheduled for Wednesday in Pickaway County Fairgrounds.

Trackmaster John Heiskell, coordinator for this year's classic, said the meet will begin at 1 p. m. Wednesday with the pole vault, discus throw, high jump and first heat of the 100-yard dash and will end at about 5 p. m. with the mile relay.

Only seven of the 11 county high schools have entered teams in this year's event. Failing to show interest in the affair are Scioto, Jackson, Darby and Atlanta.

'Pestering' High School Athletes Rapped

COLUMBUS, May 16 — State High School Athletic Commissioner H. W. Emswiler announced today his office will fight with all its powers any college athletic scouts "pestering" scholastic stars.

By "pestering," Emswiler referred to the practice of some scouts in inviting sports standouts to spend a day or a week on a college campus for a tryout, with its resultant disruption of the boys' high school program, both scholastic and athletic.

The commissioner said only one such case has come to his attention so far this year, but that he will not tolerate any such large-scale "raids" on Ohio schools as were staged by some southern institutions just prior to and following the war.

Emswiler cited sections of the National Collegiate Athletic Association which state:

"No member institution shall, directly or through its athletic staff members, or by any other means, pay the traveling expenses of any prospective student visiting its campus, nor shall it arrange for or permit excessive entertainment of such prospective student during his visit there.

"No member institution shall, on its campus or elsewhere, conduct or have conducted in its behalf any athletic practice session or test at which one or more prospective students reveal, demonstrate or display their abilities in any events or sports."

The commissioner said any violators of any part of the sections above will be cited immediately to the NCAA.

Musial Slated To Lead Mates Against Dodgers

NEW YORK, May 16—A man named Stan comes to Brooklyn today and the fence repair men are getting ready as usual. For the man is Stanley Frank Musial, the scourge of Ebbets Field in the past, and the present National League batting leader with a hefty .467 mark.

The Stanley steamer leads his St. Louis Cardinal teammates in their first Brooklyn encounter against the Dodgers this season. The teams which battled down to a last day finish in 1949 have met three times this year with St. Louis holding a 2 to 1 edge.

Presently the Red Birds are a half game behind the first place Philadelphia Phillies and the champion Dodgers are in third place, one game behind the Sawyersmen.

In the American League the spotlight is on Detroit where the pace-setting Tigers take on the Boston Red Sox. The Bengals, winners of two out of three at Fenway Park, are slated to open up with Young Art Houtteman, the classy righthander who has won four games.

It is the East in the West in the Junior Circuit and the West in the East in the National League.

The first place Phillies take on the Cincinnati Reds, the Boston Braves meet the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants are host to the Chicago Cubs, all in night games.

The second place New York Yankees, percentage points ahead of the Sox, open their first western trip tonight in St. Louis against the Browns, who are proving that psychology will never replace the base hit.

Washington is at Chicago and Philadelphia is at Cleveland in other American League night contests.

There were no day games scheduled in either league yesterday. The allright encounter between the Dodgers and the Braves was rained out.

Construction Cost Said $50,000

Pickaway County's first World War II memorial building will have its cornerstone laying ceremony in Circleville Sunday.

The memorial building is the new Christian Service Center of First Evangelical United Brethren church, costing nearly $50,000.

The Rev. Carl L. Wilson, pastor of the church, said the building is "dedicated in honor of all the boys and girls who so nobly served our country in World War II."

First floor of the new building already has been completed. The structure is situated on the site formerly occupied by the Community House of First EUB church.

Cost of completing the first floor of the building is set at $37,000, while the second floor is to be completed at a cost of $10,000. In addition, furnishing and equipping of the new building is estimated at $2,000.

THE NEW building is to be 50 feet wide and 80 feet long, according to plans, and will be joined with the church by means of an enclosed passageway.

Contract for construction of the new building has been awarded to William Loomis and Son of Logan, Loomis is a member of the Logan EUB church and of the Logan church trustee board.

First floor of the building is to consist of an assembly hall and dining hall, with an estimated seating capacity of 300; men's and ladies' restrooms and lounges; a modern kitchen; a utility room; and heating plant room.

Second floor of the structure is to be used for a children's chapel, seven classrooms and an assembly room.

The new building was named "The Service Center" by Ross Kirkpatrick after a church-wide name finding contest.

REV. MR. WILSON said the new building will be available for use by community organizations for banquets and meetings by permission of the EUB trustee board.
